New service for ESU member companies:
 the DSB instruction manual for showmen's assistants in various national languages

The new instruction manual is available in various national languages. Photo: DSB

As part of the VISION ZERO campaign, the German Showmen's Association (DSB), in cooperation with the employers' liability insurance association responsible for occupational health and safety in Germany, has developed a pictorial guide that addresses the everyday dangers in showmen's businesses and shows ways to eliminate these dangers. With a large number of photos, situations from transport to construction, the use of cranes, manoeuvring, working at great heights, etc. are explained and illustrated with text contributions.

New employees in particular can thus be made aware of potential hazards before they start work.

In order to significantly increase its reach and to enable as many companies and employees as possible to access the new guide, the instruction manual is not only available in German, but also in Polish, Romanian and Ukrainian.

Member companies of the European Showmen's Union can order the new manual free of charge from the German Showmen's Association: Phone: 0049 30 590 09 97-80, Fax: 0049 30 590 09 97-87, E-mail: mail@dsbev.de. The DSB head office will be happy to answer any further questions.
